

Opening Radix Trading through its systems lead

Account entry plan for Spencer Refer | Prepared Thursday, October 1, 2026 | Sources: HubSpot, ZoomInfo, Apollo

353 N Clark St, Chicago HQ	~175 employees	0 ZoomInfo signals	0 touches so far
STAGE Untouched prospect. No deal.	RUNNING NOW CTF SCORE - Tier B multichannel (Myung Cho), launched Oct 1-2	LAST TOUCH None	NEXT STEP Cadence running: email, call, then LinkedIn

Bottom line

Radix is a quiet, Chicago-headquartered quantitative trading firm (about 175 people, 353 N Clark St). It has no ZoomInfo signals at all, which is normal for a secretive prop shop. HubSpot has one network engineer; Apollo surfaced Myung Cho, Manager of Systems and Infrastructure, who was Deputy CTO and Global Head of Systems at Tower Research before Radix. He is senior, credible and the likely owner. With no trigger to cite, lead with the building and a respectful, expert-to-expert question.

What Radix is, in one analogy

A quiet prop firm is like a top restaurant with no sign on the door: it doesn't advertise, but it cares more about its supply chain than anyone. Approach the kitchen manager directly with something specific.

Signals worth citing

Messages, by contact

1. Myung Cho Manager, Systems and Infrastructure

Why them: Senior, credible; respect his time.

Channel: Email Tue Oct 6 | Subject: Conduit-level diversity for Radix in Chicago

Myung, a question I suspect you've asked carriers yourself: are Radix's Chicago paths verified diverse at the conduit, or just on paper? Crosstown owns underground fiber in Chicago, on-net at 350 E Cermak and Elk Grove, and maps every duct. If it's worth a look, I'll bring the map.

The plan

When	Move	Notes
Tue Oct 6	Email Myung Cho; add to HubSpot.	-
Tue Oct 13	Email Victor Kovyrshin offering the KMZ.	-
Week of Oct 26	Goal: one conversation; else nurture.	-

What progress looks like (for management)

By	Milestone	How we will know
Oct 30	Reply from Cho or Kovyrshin	Logged
