

Positioning Crosstown as Beeks' Chicago path partner

Account entry plan for Spencer Refer | Prepared Thursday, October 1, 2026 | Sources: HubSpot, Lemlist, ZoomInfo, Apollo

5 leads in Wave C, all UK-based	~102 employees (Renfrew, Scotland)	Dec 2025 full-year results published	0 replies
STAGE Wave C prospect. No deal.	RUNNING NOW CTF ABM - Beeks Group (Wave C), 5 leads	LAST TOUCH Sep 29: call to Andrew White; email 'the diversity gap in what you resell' to Gareth King	NEXT STEP Tue Oct 6: email Wayne Meyers (Global Head of Physical Infrastructure)

Bottom line

Beeks sells private cloud and connectivity to trading firms, placing infrastructure inside the exchange data centers they trade from. That makes Beeks both a possible buyer and a reseller: when a Beeks client needs a diverse path in Chicago, Beeks has to buy it from someone. Your sequence reached the right UK leaders (Wayne Meyers, Global Head of Physical Infrastructure; Gary Williams, Head of Network Operations) but nobody replied, and calls landed in UK hours. The plan frames Crosstown as a Chicago building block Beeks can resell, sent at UK-friendly times.

What Beeks is, in one analogy

Beeks is a property manager that rents furnished apartments inside the stock exchange's building to trading firms. When a tenant wants a private back stairway, the manager subcontracts it. You can be the subcontractor in Chicago.

How the access path should run

Messages, by contact

1. Wayne Meyers Global Head of Physical Infrastructure
Why them: Owns the physical layer; reseller pitch.

Channel: Email Tue Oct 6, 7:30am CT (1:30pm UK) | Subject: A Chicago path you can resell

Wayne, when a Beeks client in Chicago asks for a physically diverse route between Cermak and the suburban trading sites, who supplies it? Crosstown owns underground fiber on-net at 350 E Cermak and Elk Grove. I'd like to be the Chicago building block you can resell. Worth 20 minutes?

The plan

Thu Oct 8	Reply to Gary Williams in thread with the same angle.	-
