

Coinbase: a new infrastructure VP and strong network intent

Bottom line

Coinbase runs a regulated derivatives exchange (Coinbase Derivatives, built from Chicago-based FairX) alongside its crypto business. In September ZoomInfo showed Networking Solutions 97 (audience A), Data Center 91, Networking/Telecom 80 and Bandwidth 74. Brian Foster became VP of Infrastructure in August 2026 after running Coinbase's wholesale business, and he's leading the Citi partnership (Sep 28). A new VP plus strong intent is the best timing we'll get. Zach Lanier, Director of Network and Systems Engineering (ex-Amazon), is the technical owner; he has no email, so use LinkedIn.

What Coinbase is, in one analogy

A new VP is a new head chef: in the first 90 days he re-checks every supplier. Get on his list before the menu is set.

How the access path should run

Messages, by contact

1. Brian Foster VP, Infrastructure

Why them: New in role; derivatives in Chicago.

Channel: Email Tue Oct 6 | Subject: Coinbase Derivatives' Chicago paths

Brian, congrats on the infrastructure role. With the derivatives exchange tied to Chicago, the physical routes there are worth a look. Crosstown owns underground fiber on-net at 350 E Cermak and Elk Grove, mapped to the conduit so diversity is provable. Who on Zach's team should get our map?

2. Zach Lanier Director, Network and Systems Engineering

Why them: Technical owner.

Channel: LinkedIn Wed Oct 7 | Subject: (connection note)
